

Not For a Million Dollars

Labor Day is a holiday set aside to honor working people and labor unions. It also marks the unofficial end of summer.

In honor of Labor Day, think about your future. Adults are always asking young people, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" They never ask, "What is it that you DON'T want to be?"

Most young people have a very good idea of what they would be absolutely miserable doing. For example, Max hates sitting down and being inside all day. He would never ever want to have an office job. Alicia hates the sight of blood and knows she would never want to be a doctor or a nurse.

What do you know that you would never ever - not for all the money in the world—choose as a job or career? Write about what you would never do. How do you think such work would make you feel? Why would you never want to do it?
