

RIP

An obituary is a notice of someone's death. It usually includes a short biography. While death is a serious matter, many famous people have written their own obituaries and made light of their own eventual demise.

Comedians have long used the obituary as a source of humor. Following is an example of a humorous obituary.

Pillsbury Dough Boy Dies

Veteran Pillsbury spokesman "Pop" N. Fresh died Wednesday of a severe yeast infection. He was 71. He was buried Friday in one of the biggest funerals in years. Dozens of celebrities turned out including Mrs. Butterworth, the California Raisins, Hungry Jack, Betty Crocker, and the Hostess Twinkies.

The graveside was piled high with flours, as longtime friend Aunt Jemima delivered the eulogy, describing Fresh as a man who "never knew just how much he was kneaded".

Mr. Fresh rose quickly in show business, but his later life was filled with turnovers. He was not considered a smart cookie, and wasted much of his dough on half-baked schemes. Still, even as a crusty old man, he was a roll model to millions. Fresh is survived by his second wife. They had two children, and one in the oven.

Your task is to write the obituary for an everyday object. One that you think mankind should not have to live without. Something everyone uses. You may choose a toilet, light bulb, bathtub, or chair.
